

ABSTRACT

An apparatus for transferring heat during a burn-in procedure comprises a substantially planar base member that includes a plurality of openings extending through the base member, at least one heat sink aligned with each opening, and biasing members connected to the heat sinks for biasing the heat sinks.